Dear Manager Name: / Hi Company Name!

1. Introduction

My name's Howie, and I'm a front-end focused web developer based in US with a background in architecture. I'm currently seeking a web developer role to grow my career as a professional web developer.

2. Why make career change

My interest in tech started with work experience at WeWork. I was fascinated by how a data-driven approach is implemented in design. It's also fun to work with tech-background colleagues. They can quickly run some data analysis and explain to you why your design doesn't "work". Later at SOM, I worked on an interior project involving VR. The team added a VR interaction session to final presentation for the client. It was a big success. These two experiences really open my mind and reveal more opportunity and potential in the tech industry. In my spare time, I self-taught programming and gradually realized my true passion of web development.

3. Why choose / my story with your company

I've been a ... user since I started to self-teach web development. I've really enjoyed... MVP/ Empathy (a couple of professional terms) Or things I appreciate / could have been better.

4. Why hire me

My diverse background prepares me with both design and development skills:

- I have a keen eye for design due to my professional experience. I care about details and understand little things can make a product resonate.
- I am a design thinking advocate with proven problem solving, research and analytical skills.
- I loving building quirky, experimental products/tools inspired by life. For example, I had Snap App idea while working in architecture. Its goal is to create a photo sharing platform for architecture lovers.
- I'm passionate about learning. I believe lifelong learning is the key to live a better life. I'm excited for an opportunity for further development.

Looking forward to hearing from you,

Howie

P.S. I'm authorized to work in the United States.
